About ESDO

ESDO is the first organization to fight for a ban on polythene bags in 2002, believes that it is possible to make our environment sustainable if we all do our bit properly.

High-level Policy Dialogue on The Global Agreement on Marine Litter & Plastic Pollution for the Upcoming Fifth Session of United Nations Environment Assembly – UNEA 5.2

The United Nations Environment Assembly (UNEA) is the world's highest-level environmental decision-making body. It has been investigating methods to prevent marine plastic pollution through a special group (known as an Ad Hoc Open-Ended Expert Group) tasked with identifying barriers to and solutions for reducing marine plastic litter and microplastics from all sources, particularly land-based sources. The Environment and Social Development Organization-ESDO hosted a virtual high-level policy dialogue to address the urgent need for the Global Plastic Treaty approach in UNEA 5.2.
